MEMBER FEATURE

I first stepped into a hot glass studio at Carnegie-Mellon University in 1980 and knew immediately with a crystal clear vision that I wanted to work with glass as my artistic medium. When I first started blowing glass, I felt so comfortable and knew that I could really express my ideas with this material. Now, over forty years into glass, my passion has not cooled. I currently own and operate Yerace Glass Studio, located in Erie, PA.

Barbara Yerace says that training of an artist is like building blocks that work together synergistically to create the whole artist. My training included, but is not limited to, the following:

- BFA from Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh
- Postgraduate studies at Ohio State University
- Pilchuck School of Glass in Seattle, Washington
- Penland School of Crafts in Spruce Pine, NC
- Corning Museum of Glass in Corning, NY
- Sonoran Glass School in Tucson, AZ
- Pittsburgh Center for Glass Pittsburgh, PA
